

Dorothy M. Mazzarella

Dorothy M. Mazzarella is currently employed by the International Code Council, Inc. as the vice president of government relations. In this capacity, Mazzarella works directly with the senior vice president of government relations in achieving the department's goals related to coalition building and national code adoption, implementation, and support of the International Codes. Mazzarella works directly with the twelve state and local government relations managers as well as members and organizations nationwide.

Prior to her current position, Mazzarella (aka Harris) served as deputy secretary of state for local government and community services at the New York State Department of State. Mazzarella was responsible for the oversight of five divisions within the Department of State: Coastal Resources; Code Enforcement and Administration; Community Services; Fire Prevention and Control and Local Governments. Mazzarella also served as the chairperson of the State Fire Prevention and Building Code Council and the New York State 911 Board and represented the Secretary of State on the New York State Disaster Preparedness Commission.

Prior to this appointment, Mazzarella served as assistant secretary of state in the Department of State, director of legislative affairs for Governor George E. Pataki, executive assistant to the superintendent of the New York State Insurance Department, committee analyst, and director of the Task Force on Catastrophe Insurance of the New York State Senate Insurance Committee, and legislative assistant in the New York State Assembly.
