The International Code Council and the International Association of Electrical Inspectors collaborate to strengthen training and resources for members

The two organizations will embark on a formal relationship to develop and deliver services across their memberships

Washington, D.C. – The International Code Council and the International Association of Electrical Inspectors (IAEI) have formalized a service agreement that will allow both organizations to provide additional benefits to their respective memberships.

IAEI has long been a part of the Code Council's Preferred Provider network for electrical training. Last year, the two organizations signed an agreement to collaborate on publications, some of which are now featured on Digital Codes Premium, the Code Council's platform for digital codes.

This new joint effort will open the door for the Code Council and IAEI to collectively share subject matter expertise in order to strengthen and cultivate new training content and resources while exploring ways to enhance member value through joint membership certification offerings. IAEI and the Code Council will work together in expanding IAEI member participation on ICC electrical exam development committees as well as developing and distributing new co-branded publications for the electrical industry. The Code Council will continue to assist IAEI with the digitization of their electrical publications and training content. The two organizations will continue to work jointly to support the ongoing development and adoption of the National Fire Protection Association's (NFPA) National Electrical Code.

"Both organizations' shared commitment to public safety can be traced back nearly a century. This current agreement builds on past successful collaborations and further leverages the strengths of each association to the benefit of its members," said Mark Johnson, International Code Council Executive Vice President & Director of Business Development. "Working hand-in-hand with IAEI's leadership in electrical safety and education will allow us to better engage and serve our members."

"The IAEI Board of Directors is pleased to expand upon our already mutually beneficial relationship with the Code Council through this new service agreement," said Rudy Garza, President/CEO of IAEI. "IAEI values all its collaborative partnership agreements with other organizations in the life safety space. However, this new agreement with the Code Council stands out as it will allow IAEI to reach a new and broader audience with our publications, training, and services. It is no doubt a huge win-win for both organizations."
